

Fiction story

After the extinction of several animals in the current geological era, an embryo of a new unknown organism emerged. The New animal evolved because of the changes on the Earth and many other changes that contributed to the evolution of the organism. When my organism finally reached his final form, he had many difficulties being able to live with the other animals.

Due to these changes, several animals were extinct, and that made hunting more difficult for the organism, because with fewer animals, it is harder to get food, so the organism suffered a lot because of the food, even with these difficulties, the organism did not give up surviving and started to hunt 24 per day, so it managed food enough for years and the future especies survived.